Feedback:

Most people in the workplace suffer from a lack of performance feedback. The Feedback Famine occurs even in very small institution and in teams. It also occurs at all levels of an institution.

What do we mean by the Feedback Famine?

The Feedback Famine is a vacuum that occurs when people do not receive enough information about their performance. We are talking about formal performance feedback but ongoing, regular and informal feedback. It is timely, specific and may help the individual receiving feedback relate to:

- Whether or not they are achieving their goals
- What they are supposed to be achieving in their role i.e. why their role exists
- What they are currently doing well and what areas require improvement
- How they are impacting on others in the workplace

Why is Feedback Important?

Feedback is the most powerful, yet, most under used management tool that we have at our disposal. Feedback is powerful as it helps people get on track; it serves as a guide to assist people to know how they and others perceive their performance.

Feedback can also be very motivating and energizing. It has strong links to employee satisfaction and productivity. People like to feel involved and identified with their institution. Feedback can help achieve that state.

It is very difficult to be very self-aware without feedback from others. Self-awareness and monitoring provide a good platform but feedback from others informs us in ways that enriches our self-knowledge.

How Feedback Helps:

Feedback helps people find answers to these vital questions:

- Why does my role exist?
- What am I supposed to achieve?
- How is my performance tracking?
- How do I influence others?
- What is the quality of my relationships with my manager, team members and colleagues?

Feedback is the information we all need to be truly effective in the workplace. In fact the most effective leaders actively seek feedback to enhance their performance. These leaders intuitively recognize the power of feedback.

For the overall development of the institution, 360 degree feedback on the following aspects have been taken

1. Student feedback about the subject faculty-Teacher Evaluation Form
2. Student feedback about college(Overall)- Student Evaluation form
3. Parents Feedback about college
4. Peer evaluation
5. Feedback about syllabus from Industry experts and faculty
6. Feedback from Alumni

Procedure:

The feedback will be collected from the students who have more than 90% of the attendance. Feedback is collected confidentially and handed over to the concerned person after the analysis. The confidentiality of information will be maintained and utilized only for the growth and development of the institution.
